Vietnam War Exhibition Presentation

What do you have to do?

How can you prepare for research?

How do you find good info?
Preparation

• KNOW YOUR TASK
  – Carefully read ALL parts of your task, highlight relevant details and make notes on your Task Sheet
    • Your research journal is a key task
    • Begin thinking about key words and inquiry questions
  – Set up your Research Journal

– Read around your potential topic
  • Books, encyclopaedias, Wikipedia etc. are all good places to start
  • Add to your key words and inquiry questions (these will continue to grow the more you research)
  • Build Boolean combinations for searching: (a key skill for university study)
    – “Vietnam war” AND (tactics OR weapons)
    – “Vietnam war” AND (biological OR chemical) and (weapons OR warfare)
    – inurl:edu “Vietnam war” AND (tactics OR weapons)
    – inurl:gov “Vietnam war” AND (tactics OR weapons)
    – inurl:org “Vietnam war” AND (tactics OR weapons)
Vietnam War was the longest war in which the United States took part. It began in 1957 and ended in 1975. Vietnam, a small country in Southeast Asia, was divided at the time into the Communist Democratic Republic of Vietnam, commonly called North Vietnam, and the non-Communist Republic of Vietnam, commonly called South Vietnam. North Vietnamese and Communist-trained South Vietnamese rebels sought to overthrow the government of South Vietnam and to eventually reunite the country. The United States and the South Vietnamese army tried to stop them, but failed.

The Vietnam War was actually the second phase of fighting in Vietnam. During the first phase, which began in 1946, the Vietnamese fought France for control of Vietnam. At that time, Vietnam was part of the French colonial empire in Indochina. The United States sent France military equipment, but the Vietnamese defeated the French in 1954. Vietnam was then split into North and South Vietnam.

United States aid to France and later to non-Communist South Vietnam was based on a Cold War policy of President Harry S. Truman. The Cold War was an intense rivalry between Communist and non-Communist nations. Truman had declared that the United States must help any nation challenged by Communism. The Truman Doctrine was at first directed at Europe and the Middle East. But it was also adopted by the next three presidents, Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, and Lyndon B. Johnson, and applied to Indochina. They feared that if one Southeast Asian nation joined the Communist camp, the others would also "fall," one after the other, like what Eisenhower called "a row of dominoes."

The Vietnamese Communists and their allies called the Vietnam War a war of national liberation. They saw the Vietnam War as an extension of the struggle with France and as another attempt by a foreign power to rule and U.S. support of South Vietnam and to reunite the north and south into a single nation. China and the Soviet Union, at that time the two largest Communist nations, gave the Vietnamese Communists war materials but not troops.

The Vietnam War had several stages. From 1957 to 1963, North Vietnam aided rebels opposed to the government of South Vietnam, which fought the rebels with U.S. aid and advisory personnel. From 1964 to 1969, North Vietnam and the United States did much of the fighting. Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, South Korea, and Thailand also helped South Vietnam. By April 1969, the number of U.S. forces in South Vietnam had reached its peak of more than 543,000 troops. By July, the United States had slowly begun to withdraw its forces from the region.

In January 1973, a cease-fire was arranged. The last American ground troops left Vietnam two months later. The fighting began again soon afterward, but U.S. troops did not return to Vietnam. South Vietnam surrendered on...
Weapons of the Vietnam War

This article needs additional citations for verification. Please help improve this article by adding citations to reliable sources. Unsourced material may be challenged and removed. (October 2007)

A wide variety of weapons were used by the different armies operating in the Vietnam War.

Combatants included:
- the army of the Republic of South Vietnam (ARVN) (South Vietnamese Army);
- the People’s Army of Vietnam (PAVN), commonly known as the North Vietnamese Army (NVA);
- the National Front for the Liberation of South Vietnam (NLF), better known as the Viet Cong (VC);
- all services of the U.S. military;
- the armies of South Korea, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, and the Philippines; and a variety of irregular troops. Nearly all allied forces including the ARVN and Australians were armed with U.S. weapons, some of which, such as the M1 Carbine, were substitute standard weapons dating from World War II. The Australian army employed the 7.62 mm FN FAL under the licence of L1A1 Self-Loading Rifle as their service rifle, with the occasional US M16. The NVA, although having inherited a miscellany of American, French, and Japanese weapons from World War II and the First Indochina War (aka French Indochina War), were largely armed and supplied by the People’s Republic of China, the Soviet Union, and its Warsaw Pact allies. In addition, some weapons—notably ant-personnel explosives, the K-60M (a PPSh-41 copy), and “home-made” versions of the RPG-2—were manufactured in Vietnam. By 1969 the US Army had identified 40 rifle/caliber types, 22 machine gun types, 17 types of mortar, 20 recoilless rifle or rocket launcher types, 9 types of antitank weapons, and 14 anti-aircraft artillery weapons used by ground troops on all sides. Also in use, primarily by anti-communist forces, were the 24 types of armored vehicles and self-propelled artillery, and 26 types of field artillery & rocket launchers.[1]

Communist forces were principally armed with Chinese[2] and Soviet weaponry[3] though some Viet Cong guerilla units were equipped with Western infantry weapons either captured from French stocks during the first Indochina war or from ARVN units or requisitioned through illicit purchase.[4] The ubiquitous Soviet AK-47 was widely regarded as the best assault rifle of the war and it was not uncommon to see U.S. special forces with captured AK-47s.

The American M16, which replaced the M14, was lighter and considered more accurate than the AK-47 but was prone to jamming. Often the gun suffered from a jamming flaw known as “failure to extract,” which meant that a spent cartridge case stuck out the muzzle.[5] According to a congressional report, the jamming was caused primarily by a change in gunpowder which was done without adequate testing and reflected a decision for which the safety of soldiers was a secondary consideration. The heavily armored, 90 mm M48A3 Patton tank saw extensive action during the Vietnam War and over 600 were deployed with US Forces. They played an important role in infantry support though there were few tank versus tank battles. The M114 155mm variant used in Vietnam. Artillery was used extensively by both sides but the Americans were able to ferry the lightweight 105 mm M102 howitzer by helicopter to remote locations on quick notice.[7][8] With its 17-mile (27 km) range, the 155 mm was the primary weapon used during the war. The 37mm anti-tank gun saw action as well, not being until World War II that such a high calibre anti-tank gun was used.[9] The Vietnamese air force was the best in the region.

The United States had air superiority though many aircraft were lost to surface-to-air missiles and anti-aircraft artillery. U.S. air power was credited with breaking the siege of Khe Sanh and blunting the 1972 Communist offensive against South Vietnam’s coastline, using aircraft carriers as platforms for offshore strikes and other naval vessels for offshore artillery support. Offshore naval fire played a pivotal role in the Battle for the city of Hue, providing accurate fire in support of the U.S. counter-offensive.[10]

The Vietnam War was the first conflict that saw wide scale tactical deployment of helicopters.[11] The Bell UH-1 Iroquois was used extensively in counter-guerilla operations both as a troop carrier and a gunship.[12] In the latter role, the “Huey” as it was known, was a multipurpose machinegun, multi-barreled 7.62 mm Gatling guns and unguided air-to-surface rockets.[13] The Hueys were also successfully used in MEDEVAC and search and rescue roles.[14]

MODERN HISTORY ASSIGNMENT WRITING GUIDE

1. INTRODUCTION:

The Vietnam War was a conflict that had impacts on not only Vietnam as a country but also on both the United States of America and Australia. It was also the first major conflict that was played out on televisions around the world. In fact, it has been said that:

Television brought the brutality of war into the comfort of the living room.

Marshall McLuhan (Montreal Gazette May 16, 1975)

2. THE TASK:

The Powerhouse Museum in Brisbane is holding an exhibition called “Vietnam through the lens” and has asked senior Modern History students of Queensland to create the collections to be on show. Each student will select a ‘space’ in the museum to create their exhibition presentation and is expected to give an opening speech to explain their choices. Your exhibition could contain, but is not limited to, the following ideas:

- multimedia presentation/s
- photographs
- artworks
- videos
- letters
- poetry

You must undertake the research process on a topic of your choice before creating your exhibition and writing your speech. Your speech should follow that of the inquiry process.
3. TOPIC SELECTION:

Students should select ONE of the following as the basis for their research. Own choice topics are permissible as long as you consult your teacher about their suitability.

1. Significant turning point/s in the conflict
2. The impact on Vietnamese civilians during and/or after the Vietnam war
3. The impact on soldiers during and/or after the Vietnam war
4. The impact of conflicting ideologies – communism v capitalism
5. Significant event/s in the course of the conflict
6. Australian involvement in the conflict
7. Own choice but MUST be approved by your teacher

Agent Orange - The 50 Worst Inventions

By Dan Fletcher  May 27, 2010

A potent herbicide used from 1961 to 1971 in the Vietnam War, Agent Orange was designed to cut through Vietnam's thick canopy of foliage to reveal enemy troops beneath. While it succeeded, the price was high: exposure proved deadly to humans, causing cancers, birth defects and a host of other terrible outcomes. Today, the VA continues to struggle to provide relief to veterans of this lethal chemical.
